

Titre: Measuring Continuum Polarization with NeoNarval

Author: A. López Ariste

Abstract: I explore the feasibility of measuring continuum and broadband polarization with NeoNarval. While the sensitivity and precision of NeoNarval to measure line polarization is time-proven, the measurement of continuum polarisation is not possible as per today. I will present the reasons for this difference, how to address them, some first results and a roadmap for future instrument upgrades.